'Changing the Script' is part of a series of gatherings designed to inform, inspire and empower people living and working with mental distress

Who's it for?

The event is for anyone curious about a compassionate approach to mental health. We bring together people and families with personal experience, front-line staff, commissioners, managers, clinicians, GPs, policymakers and Third Sector staff, to explore a range of alternative approaches.

What's it about?

Compassionate Mental Health is part of a growing worldwide movement calling for a more integrative approach to mental health - one that relies less on diagnosis and prescription drugs, and more on empowering, supporting and engaging social networks. At the heart of the project is a belief that it is possible to begin to heal oneself and others through the power of community, connection, self care and solidarity.

We're bringing people together for a day of conversation and workshops. The theme of this Autumn's gathering is 'Changing the Script'.

Our key message remains that a mental health crisis can become a meaningful turning point and catalyst for change. We believe a culture of compassion and collaboration must replace over medicalisation, coercion and restraint.

Along with many other critical voices - we are calling for a radical shift in the way we understand mental illness, changing the script, challenging stigma and raising expectations. This is a gathering and unconference, but there are key learning outcomes associated with service transformation, moving towards a more co-productive, psychosocial approach.

Each gathering has been held in a venue that is therapeutic in its own way. This time we're delighted to be at The Left Bank Village in the heart of the historic cathedral city of Hereford in a stunning riverside setting. Let's leave behind our professional and personal roles and labels, build community and connection, and move forward together to create positive change.

Or is the uncomfortable truth that there’s a continuum, a scale along which we all slide back and forth during our lives. When we separate ourselves we hurt those labelled as sick, ill, even mad, but we also hurt ourselves...”

Compassionate Mental Health

About Us

Compassionate Mental Health is a Community Interest Company (number 11938822) working with people across the UK and internationally, who have experienced difficulties with their mental health; their families and support networks; those who work within the field of mental health, and the wider public.

We promote compassionate approaches to mental health, and aim to be part of radically changing the conversation around mental illness.

We run a series of gatherings that showcase a range of compassionate approaches to mental health and wellbeing. These provide accessible opportunities for people to have transformational learning experiences, and model an environment of safety and community for people to step back from their lives and recover a sense of purpose and wellness.

We also offer training, communication, publications, influencing and research activities to support people to rediscover meaning in their lives and recover a sense of hope for their future.

Directors: Brigid Bowen, Sir Stephen O'Brien and Dr Sang-eet Bhullar (company number 11938822)

Workshops

Mindful Movement

(optional early arrival) Alex Cat

A gentle 45 minute Trauma Sensitive Yoga class. Explore how adapting shapes and simple movements can change sensations in the body. In this session, all options to move, feel and choose will be offered as genuine invitations. There will be no physical adjustment. Participants will not be told what they should or should not be feeling. Alex (the facilitator) will be practicing alongside you. Every level of physical ability is 100% welcome. No special clothes are needed. No prior yoga experience is needed. You are welcome to bring your own mat, cushion, blanket - whatever will support your comfort wish.

Introduction to Trauma Sensitive Yoga

Alex Cat

“Just inhabiting my own skin is a major step forward....My not being able to get into my own skin was something that I did early on just to survive.”
~ Trauma Sensitive Yoga student

Since 2003 The Trauma Centre in Massachusetts has been offering a very particular form of yoga to a variety of complex trauma survivors, including war veterans, sexual assault survivors, at-risk youth and survivors of chronic childhood abuse and neglect. The practice is called Trauma Sensitive Yoga. In this introductory workshop participants will explore the neurobiology of trauma, particularly in relation to safety and threat. Trauma reactions are seen as an understandable response to life events, and there will be a chance to explore some survival mechanisms, including interoception, dissociation, hypovigilance and hypervigilance. There will also be an experiential session of Trauma Sensitive Yoga (see above for more information on this).

Understanding the Principles and Practice of Open Dialogue

Yasmin Ishaq and Rai Waddingham

Open Dialogue combines a way of understanding mental distress, a therapeutic practice and a way of organising mental health and social care. The approach is systemic at heart, working with the person and those who are most important to them. Its commitment to dialogue, valuing different perspectives, continuity and transparency has inspired passionate support from service users, family members, clinicians and managers alike. Open Dialogue equips staff of all disciplines with the tools to effect change at deeper levels, and discover how we can reshape a social response to psychosis and emotional crisis. Open Dialogue was developed in Western Lapland in Finland over the last 25-30 years with the best documented outcomes in the Western World.

Introduction to Sensorimotor

Psychotherapy

Margaret Jordan

Margaret Jordan has specialised in the treatment of psychological trauma for the past thirty years. She founded and ran a trauma centre for people addicted to drug and alcohol, and currently runs a trauma centre for complex post traumatic stress. In this workshop she will introduce simple, body-oriented interventions for tracking, naming, and safely exploring trauma-related activation. You will learn effective, accessible interventions for working with disruptive behavioral patterns, disturbed cognitive and emotional processing, and a fragmented sense of self. Sensorimotor Psychotherapy can be easily and effectively integrated into psychodynamic, cognitive-behavioral, and EMDR-focused treatments.

Bad Me? Working Compassionately & Creatively with Feelings of Toxicity

Rai Waddingham

Many people struggle with feelings of shame, self-doubt and a felt-sense of being 'wrong' or 'bad'. At times, these feelings can be so intense that we may worry that our presence in the world is harmful to others. Such experiences are often left unspoken, unexplored and dismissed as delusions or obsessions. This workshop, using Rai's lived experience as a starting point, explores some different ways we come to understand, learn from and work with these feelings. It asks how we may become more compassionate and curious towards those experiences that we naturally shy away from.

Although the Cretan Labyrinth, depicted in the Mappa Mundi, was built to trap the Minotaur, labyrinths have also been symbolic of pilgrimage and used for contemplation and quieting the mind.
